

INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON OVERHEAD LINES
March 29-April 2, 2026
Fort Collins, Colorado U.S.A.

Copyright Transfer and Retained Rights Agreement

The Corresponding Author, acting on behalf of all authors, including co-authors of the submitted paper, and in consideration for the paper's acceptance and publication in the proceedings of the International Conference on Overhead Lines (ICOL), hereby assigns all copyrights in the paper to ICOL.

Rights Retained by Authors and Employers

In exchange for this transfer, ICOL grants the authors and their employers the following non-exclusive, royalty-free rights:

1. To retain all proprietary rights other than copyright, including but not limited to patent rights.
2. To reuse all or part of the paper in future works, such as journal articles, presentations, or books, provided that appropriate citation to the original ICOL publication is included.
3. To reproduce the paper for personal, educational, or internal business purposes, including distribution within the author's organization.
4. To distribute pre-publication versions (e.g., preprints or drafts) of the paper, with the understanding that the final published version remains under the copyright of ICOL.
5. If the work was prepared under a U.S. Government contract, the U.S. Government is granted a royalty-free license to reproduce and distribute the paper, and to authorize others to do so, for official U.S. Government purposes.

All rights not expressly granted to the authors under this agreement are reserved by ICOL. The Corresponding Author affirms that they have the authority to enter into this agreement and to transfer copyright on behalf of all co-authors.
